NEW PATENT SHAFT COUPLING!
W. E. COOPER
HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS
County of the above Patent, and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his establishment.
Carriage Factory,
Corner of Second and Morrison Streets.
He respectfully refers to the following
CARD.
Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling, invented by H. B. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used.
It fastens without bolt or screw, and is therefore, easily and speedily separated. It rests on Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is convenient, safe and secure.
It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use the new invention ourselves and recommend the use in all cases. We consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent, heretofore considered the best in use.

[DESPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO SEPTEMBER 23.

New York Democracy.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 22.—The Democratic State Convention met at noon. J. Filden called the Convention to order and made an address criticising the administration of Grant and his journeyings about the country, his treatment of the South, the Fifteenth Amendment, and strongly condemning the proposition to make voters regardless of race or color.

Fire at Oil City.

OIL CITY, Sept. 22.—The Standard Oil Works have been burning all the morning. The loss is unknown.

Suicide at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—E. M. Samuels, President of the Commercial Bank, committed suicide this forenoon by cutting his throat.

Tragedy in Wisconsin.

MADISON, Sept. 22.—A terrible tragedy occurred near this city yesterday afternoon. Wm. Moody, an old and respected farmer, murdered his wife with a hatchet. He then dragged the body from the house and set fire to the dwelling and outhouses, standing guard with a gun and allowing no one to interfere or save anything until all was consumed. He then shot himself dead. A considerable amount of money was burned.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—A perfect panic prevails in the stock market on Vanderbilt's stock. New York Central declined 33 per cent., Hudson 12, and other stocks also fell.

Omaha Dispatch.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23.—An Omaha dispatch says Gen. Augur left for Fort Bridger and Salt Lake yesterday.

The Pacific Railroad Commissioners returned to Omaha yesterday. They have made a rougher examination of the road than any previous party.

Reports from the Pawnee reservation are, that there is trouble between the Pawnees and Sioux. Several of the former were killed by the Sioux and the Pawnees and U. S. troops were in pursuit.

Reports from Fort Buford state that the Indians continue hostile. Outrages are also being committed in Montana.

Gen. Turner, U. S. A., was married here yesterday to Miss Blanch Soulard.

Profanity Sensational.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The President intends to permit the delivery of the Spanish gunboats which are building here. He will then accord to the Cubans the same privilege. This is equivalent to the recognition of belligerency. War may result from this.

Massachusetts Republican Convention.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 22.—At the Republican State Convention the attendance was large and the spirit enthusiastic. Chas. Sumner presided, and made an eloquent speech. The entire State ticket was nominated by acclamation. For State Auditor, Chas. Endicott, of Canton, was nominated.

New York Democratic Convention.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 23.—Allen C. Beach was chosen Permanent Chairman of the Democratic Convention. The following ticket was nominated: Secretary of State, Homer A. Nelson; Comptroller, W. F. Allen; Attorney General, M. K. Champlain; State Treasurer, Wheeler H. Bristol; Canal Commissioner, Wm. W. Wright; State Prison Inspector, E. Larkin, of Ulster; Judges of the Court of Appeals, John A. Scott, of Kings, and Robt. Earl, Herkimer.

Miscellaneous.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—A disturbance occurred last night on board the British ship Alexandria, while lying at port, bound for Liverpool. The captain and mate were severely stabbed while attempting to quell the disturbance.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The picnic of the Lady Masons at Rikersville, N. J., was disturbed by roughs. Pistols were freely used and several persons wounded.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—At the hearing in the Brooks case, Keenan was discharged and Hamilton and Atwell remanded. All the others were released on bail. Brooks failed to recognize any of these persons as being present when he was shot.

Spain and the United States.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Contrary to European telegrams, there is no reason for supposing that the Spanish Government took offense at the proposed mediation of the United States in the Cuban matter, or has sought to involve other governments in its action. The Spanish Government after mature deliberation has thanked the United States Government for its friendly disposition, but is not willing to accept the terms proposed. The gist of the matter simply is, the mediation is declined.

Donation by Peabody.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 22.—George Peabody visited Peabody Institute during the meeting of the trustees to-day, and made an additional donation of three hundred thousand Tennessee six per cent. bonds, and ten thousand Virginia bonds, for the purpose of erecting a building similar to one adjoining the present Institute, the site of which is already purchased.

South America.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The Arizona brings Panama dates to August 30th. The commercial depression still rules in Panama. There were several shocks of earthquake along the Panama coast, August 15th. At Arica the shock was terribly severe. One account says that in Arica there were forty earthquakes on the 19th, all more or less severe. The people, dreading another sea inundation, have completely deserted the place, taking refuge in Lima. In Iquiquea very strong shock was felt, causing people to desert their beds and take to the surrounding pampas. Similar reports of earthquakes were received from Tacina and Arequipa.

Yellow Fever has broken out in Pisagua and Hezouras.

Summer on Foreign Affairs.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 22.—Senator Sumner in his speech at the Republican Convention to-day, discussing our foreign relations, said in reference to Cuban insurrection, the manifest policy of the United States is strict non-intervention, except in the way of good offices. In regard to the recognition of belligerent rights of the Cubans he said we find no government, no judiciary, nothing to authorize such recognition, and in reference to England he said, while we had suffered shamefully as a nation at the hands of England, in view of all England's incredibility, he would not attempt to set a price on the debt nor make a formal demand for a dollar, nor for an apology; but leave it to England after due consideration of the subject, to offer such reparation as she deems proper. It then remains for our country to decide what reparation we shall require. On the subject of the proposed annexation of Canada, he expressed a belief that the day is already dawning when we shall see the whole land under the government of the United States.

New York Democratic Platform.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The Democratic Convention at its evening session adopted a platform reaffirming former pledges to the people in regard to the questions of public policy; proclaiming Democratic devotion to the institutions of the Government, fidelity to its honor, their nationality, patriotism and unswerving loyalty to the Constitution; demanding the restoration of State governments, general amnesty, abolition of the Freedmen's bureau and subordination of the military to the civil power.

Upon the question of finance the resolutions take ground for equal taxation of Federal securities, the payment of the debt according to contract and the restoration of a sound constitutional currency. They favor internal improvements, the enlargement of the State canal and the reduction of tolls. They oppose the fifteenth amendment as debasing and demoralizing the representative system; denounce the administration of Grant as false to its pledges and promises of peace, and lowering the tone of our national ability upon foreign questions. They oppose the registration and excise laws, eulogize Governor Hoffman's administration and oppose the State amended Constitution.

Massachusetts Republican Platform.

WORCESTER, Sept. 22.—The resolutions of the Republican Convention reaffirm devotion to the principles and policy of the Republican party, declare that the Democratic party has forfeited forever all claims to the confidence of the people; assert that the reconstructed States are not beyond the watchful care of the National Government; welcome repentant rebels back to citizenship, while insisting upon complete protection to loyal whites and blacks; express the utmost confidence in the administration of President Grant; require a just distribution of the burden of taxes, rigid economy in public expenditures, less special legislation, a material abridgment of sessions of the Legislature; assert the right of protection of labor, and that legislation on the subject of Temperance should be left to the Legislatures.

General Telegrams.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—The executive committee of the National Emigration Convention have issued an address to the Irishmen of the United States, briefly stating the object of the organization, which is to induce Irishmen to settle on the free lands of the West, instead of congregating in the large cities, and urging a full attendance at the Convention from every State.

The executive committee of the National Capitol Convention have invited Horace Greeley to preside at the Convention.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 22.—The United States special agent to-day brought seven farmers from the interior counties who have been engaged in illicit distilleries. The parties were bound over before the Commissioner.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 22.—A still containing 700 bbls of oil took fire this morning and exploded, fatally burning six workmen. Another still with 800 bbls. also caught fire and was destroyed.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Times says the Spanish have found an advantage in a bold display of patriotism and national courage. They responded their affronts with immediate defiance, though their threatened adversary is ten times more powerful than themselves. Silence is manifestly frightened at the exhibition of his proceedings, and has requested further instructions. Pending the reply from Washington, he desires to withdraw his note. If this is the actual position of the case, Spain owns it to her own fearlessness, which may savor of unreason but does not partake of the nature of bravado. She has declared that if driven to extremes she will fight. No doubt she will, for that it is to her advantage to do so is out of the question, but as matters stand she will lose less by war than her adversary. America may fairly decline an easy victory on such partial issues. The people and Government of Spain are resolved not to part with Cuba without a struggle. The contest would only end in the sacrifice of Cuba, coupled with that slighter loss. Sickles expected no such resistance as his note provoked. Possibly, in fact, such opposition to his proceedings may be qualified or repudiated by his government. It is believed he exceeded his authority, and America cannot be responsible for his acts.

FLORENCE, Sept. 21.—It is officially announced that the Commission appointed to investigate the late grist mill riots have reported in favor of granting amnesty to all implicated.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The Herald's special from London says the ritualist, clerical and lay, are just now deeply excited over the contents of letters or rescripts of Pope Pius, in which his holiness repudiates the Eta of Catholics, or persons not in full communion with the Catholic Church, attending the Ecumenical Council at Rome and taking part in the proceedings. Pusyism or ritualism will not be allowed. Delegates must belong to the Holy Mother by profession and baptism. Rev. Dr. Cummings will not consequently, have the opportunity of oral discussion with the assembled prelates.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The Emperor presided at the Council of Ministers to-day.

The Pennsylvania Colliery Explosion.

[Correspondence of the New York Tribune.]

AVONDALE, PA., Sept. 9, 1869.

The great mining calamity has proved to be an acute sensation. There is something in this terrible prolongation of agony that [illegible] sensibility, or at least to prevent [illegible] manifestation of grief. Certain it is that as each dead body is borne out from the tunnel to the little terrace on the hillside upon which I [illegible] is the [illegible] willingness to the [illegible] sensitivity above and through the railroad track below have made lower exhibitions of feeling. When the first body came out in the dim dawn of yesterday morning there was a frenzied rush of the multitude to the rope inclosing the area; that may have been from curiosity alone, but when James Gowen, President of the Miners' Union of Plymouth, entwined the arms and [illegible] the [illegible] wail of anguish rose from every [illegible]. But as body after body was brought out, the crowd became less eager, were less demonstrative and [illegible], and by the time the last victim [illegible] the matter had fallen into a [illegible] routine. Inside the ropes, the officials [illegible] outside, the people merely awaited the announcement of [illegible] with [illegible] interest, and when the friends of the dead were identified, they came forward and carried away the body, nobody seemed to know where or to be concerned about the matter.

I am raising extraordinary, for I would not be understood as asserting that [illegible] have not been to-day, yesterday, and every hour since the calamity occurred, exhibitions of the most [illegible] agony in individual cases. When the [illegible] of the dead was announced to the wife or mother, waiting in the throng, sometimes the [illegible] would crush her to the [illegible] and she [illegible] away, [illegible] for [illegible] sometimes it wrung from her [illegible] wails of grief,

The Daily Oregonian.

FRIDAY MORNING, SEPT. 24, 1869.

The Cuban Imbroglio.

It appears that quite a dust has been raised in Europe by a recent note of Minister Sickles to the Spanish Regency, on the subject of Cuba. The tenor of his note is not given, but it understood to be an offer of mediation on the part of the United States between Spain and the Cuban insurgents, with a view of the acknowledgment of the independence of the island. Sickles is also supposed to have represented that public sentiment in America is decidedly on the side of the insurgents, and that the United States will probably soon concede to them belligerent rights. It is intimated from various sources that he has exceeded his instructions, and put our Government in a false position, but this cannot yet be known.

We agree with the Chicago Republican that it is time that the press of this country shall cease its sensational manner of treating international subjects and questions. There is no disposition among the people to do injustice to Spain or to any other nation. We are not a nation of freebooters seeking to steal everything which may be found lying out over right. There is but one honest and honorable course for us to pursue in reference to Spain and Cuba, and this course is perfectly clear and well defined. We should treat Spain in this Cuban matter precisely as we would wish, and ought to wish, Spain to treat us under similar circumstances. At present a great pressure is being brought to bear upon the Government by the so-called friends of Cuba, in order to obtain our recognition of the belligerent rights of the Revolutionists. These parties think such recognition would greatly benefit the insurgents, and this is why they seek it. But there was never a greater mistake. Such acknowledgment would tend to do the Cubans more harm than good. It would, on the one hand, compel us to be as careful as ever to prevent aid being sent to the insurgents from this country, while, on the other, it would enable the Spaniards to institute a rigorous search for contraband of war, on any vessel found in Cuban waters, or even suspected of being bound to those waters from any part of the world. Of course we have a perfect right, according to international law, at any period we see fit to accord the Cubans belligerent rights. That is a question for us, not for Spain, to decide. But when we accord the Cubans such rights, we are bound by the laws of nations to treat both parties to the struggle in a precisely similar manner; in other words, to be perfectly neutral between the two. Those who seek this acknowledgment, than, on the part of our Government cannot reasonably suppose it will benefit Cuba, unless they look upon it as an intimation to Spain that it is a protest against her policy on the island, or against her claim to it as a portion of the Spanish dominion. But legally it is no such protest. To be sure, we complained of Great Britain for her hasty recognition of the belligerency of the rebels; but the complaint was made upon sentimental rather than legal grounds; upon the ground that it gave a moral support and status to the rebellion which it otherwise would not have. If made upon any other ground it cannot hold good unless

It is difficult to see how we can interfere in the premises, unless we put our protestation upon the ground that the whole policy of Spain in relation to Cuba is wrong; that she has forfeited her rights in the island; and that the time has come for the United States to intervene, not only in the cause of an oppressed people, but in the name of justice and humanity, and the rights of revolution against a most unjust and barbarous oppression in the interest of progress and humanity. As yet no one has been able to point out the existence of such a state of facts as would warrant this action. The administration has so far pursued a cautious and discreet course, and there seems to be no reason for supposing that there will be any deviation from it.

The Tweed-Belmont War.

The managers of the New York Democratic Convention at Syracuse are telegraphing all over the country that they are a wonderfully harmonious assemblage of political brethren. This is done to hide the quarrels which it is known prevail in the party to an extent not known there for years. There has been a general falling out among the "big Injuns" of Tammany. Belmont, Seymour and the World are one side, and Tweed, Hoffman and Oakey Hall on the other. The latter seem to be the more powerful, and are designated by the World as the "corruptionists of the Ring." That paper charges that these ringleaders, by "shameless and cunning frauds," manipulated the election in New York City last fall in such a way as to make Seymour's vote fall far below Hoffman's; and it goes so far as to say that they would have given the State to Grant had they dared to do so. Of the World's charges, the Times remarks: "We were aware that Tweed belongs to the corruptionists of the 'Ring,' but this is the first time, we believe, that the World has so designated him. We knew too that there were shameless and cunning frauds in the election, but the connection therewith of Messrs. Tweed and Hall has not until now been proclaimed by the World." It will be remembered that the Republicans last fall charged the perpetration of frauds upon the Tammany Ring, and now the leading organ of that party, in its rage and resentment against some of the "Ring," confesses it. The war between the Tweed and Belmont factions is growing interesting. The "corruptionists of the Ring," as the World designates the former, lose no opportunity of proclaiming their hostility to Belmont as Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, and their determination to instal Tweed in his place. Belmont is still in Europe, but that he is not indifferent may be inferred, as the Times remarks, from the telegraphic announcement of his intention to return in time to "checkmate the conspiracy" which is in progress against him. The fight promises to develop something of interest and advantage to the Republicans of New York and of the whole country.

The full text of the platform of the Wisconsin Democrats shows that on the bond question generally they eschew Mr. Pendleton and his heresies. They quietly drop what he champions as a cardinal article in the Democratic creed. They rejoice, moreover, in the extinction of slavery, and "in the prompt and general acquiescence of the Southern people in the results of the war." These are expressions of opinion which must startle the old leaders. Wisconsin Democrats have for some time past insisted that a new point of departure is necessary, if the Democratic party is to live; and they have taken a step which the party in other States must imitate.

Excessively Irritable.

The Olympia Transcript will have it that in the good time coming, when the terminal emporium gets in full blast, Oregon must trade exclusively through Puget Sound. "As well," says the Transcript in that fervid and imaginative style which is so especially noticeable in all terminal organs,—"As well talk of continuing the old mode of emigrating from Illinois, Iowa, and Missouri, across the plains with ox-teams, as to talk of commerce continuing to drag over the worst bar on the American coast, and then drag a hundred and fifty miles through shoals, mud, and snags, with the great international railway and Puget Sound lying right alongside." This is strong writing, we admit; but in view of the actual facts of the situation we cannot deem it quite conclusive. What makes our northern neighbors so touchy on this particular subject? It is this: The trade of Oregon is relied on by them as a principal auxiliary in building their great emporium, and they cannot bear the idea of allowing that trade to follow its natural channel, the Columbia river. Such a suggestion irritates them excessively. They have built great hopes on the commerce of Oregon, and they will not willing hear any iconoclastic disbeliever utter a word against their theory. It seems never to have occurred to them that, even if the Columbia river and Puget Sound were already connected by rail, the greater part of the trade between Oregon and the Sound would still be carried on by water, because shipments between the two sections could be made at less cost by river and ocean than by rail. During the past summer freights by steamer from Portland to points on the Sound have been lower than the same could be by rail,—if a railway were already in operation. When a railway is built between the Columbia river and the Sound it will get the passenger traffic because it will be the shorter and the quicker route; but the great bulk of shipments will go and come by sea. Now as we can ship from here to the Sound by water cheaper than by rail, why should the commerce of Oregon go to the Sound by rail to find an outlet? And why, in fact, should it go there at all? We can ship from here at lower rates than we can ship from the Sound and pay intermediate railroad charges, and we can and will import goods at less cost in vessels coming direct to our doors than in vessels coming into the Sound. We believe there is no instance on record to show that the building of railroads, no matter how numerous, has ever stopped the navigation of so great river as the Columbia. But we regret that our terminal friends should consider the Columbia river so deadly an adversary, and keep up so fierce an attack on the unoffending stream!

Virginia Coming Home.

The Richmond Enquirer and Examiner is jubilant over the turn affairs have taken in Virginia. After thanking the President and Horace Greely and everybody for the defeat of the plan of the Radicals to purge the Legislature of the members who could not take the test oath, it says:

Now let our people cheer up. Our political troubles are at an end. Every man can now make his contracts, lay his plans, with a full assurance of a peaceful and quiet future. We trust and believe, that the effects will be at once visible in the renewed energy and hopefulness with which all branches of industry will immediately be inspired. Let us hear no more croaking.

This is good. "Let us hear no more croaking." It is gratifying indeed to hear from Virginia something more musical than a howl. But while the Democrats of Virginia are coming on so bravely the Democrats of New York continue to "croak." Their platform, reported to-day, is full of croaking. It is nothing but croaking. It is noticeable that while the leading Democratic organ of Virginia is jubilant and happy, declaring the political troubles of the South at an end, the Democratic platform of New York arraigns and condemns the President for violating his pledges toward the Southern people and preventing the return of peace! Somuch more reasonable is the Southern than the Northern wing of the late rebellion.

In General.

New York Democrats are busy making a platform. They are at variance on the financial question and only agree in denouncing the radicals as being guilty of all sorts of crimes, too numerous and vague for mention, and that the President is abominably culpable in taking a summer vacation. This is a wonderful platform for "the only party which has a national history."

The San Francisco Dispatch, a Democratic paper, in a recent argument against Chinese labor, said: "Those people have been in California for twenty years, but have made no progress." As they came twenty years ago, or more than ten years before the Republicans got control of the Government, there would seem to be little ground for dispute as to who brought them here or allowed them to come.

The Herald announces that it will not be diverted from its fell purpose of waging war, horrid exterminating war, upon the Union League and bondholders; though it intimates that somebody, feeling the force of its terrible assaults would be glad to beguile it into an armistice. Now we hope no one will attempt to chain this raging lion. Fierce and minatory as it seems, it is really as harmless an animal as ever went frisking about, wrapped up in calf-skin.

The Albany Democrat takes it as a great "favor" to have been furnished with a telegraphic synopsis of Pendleton's recent groan-back speech. Had we known that the Democrat was so hungry for this sort of pabulum we could have sent it the speech long ago, as it is the same one which Pendleton has been delivering during the last three years. We have several of them left over, which were kindly forwarded to us in 1867, and during the last Presidential campaign.

One of the Democratic papers of this city sneers at the idea that the price of labor is regulated by the law of demand and supply. It also says that "the enslaved millions of the old continents are to be used for the purpose of enslaving and crushing the spirit of liberty in the new world." We don't assent to either of these profound propositions. But suppose the last one were true, what is to be done about it? Will the Democracy resolve itself into a Know Nothing party to keep back "the enslaved millions from the old continents?"

The Cincinnati Gazette has an article grouping together this principle acts of George H. Pendleton in opposition to the Union cause. The record shows that every measure for national preservation met his uncompromising hostility. The Gazette says: "He began by turning all the power of his eloquence, all the wealth of his scholarship, all his social and political influence in favor of the rebellious States, and to the last he maintained, with an unalterable fixedness of purpose, that the nation must not attempt to save itself. His record speaks for itself."

The Boston Advertiser publishes a letter from Europe, written by an eminent Boston banker, in which the fact is stated that the dishonorable propositions in finance which are put forth by a political party in this country give a feeling of insecurity in regard to American bonds; and though many Europeans have been tempted by a high rate of interest to invest in them, such investments have been made in the face of supposed risk and by the more daring and less conservative class of investors. The interest is thus kept up at a high rate by the action of the baser sort of American politicians. This Democratic party is costing the country a good deal more than the principal of the debt which was created by their unfaithfulness and want of patriotism.

The Herald at last denies in plain terms that it employs Chinamen. Now that paper has been published in the same building with the OREGONIAN for nearly three years, and during all that time hardly a week has passed in which we have not seen Chinamen passing and repassing our door doing work for that establishment. They were at it only yesterday. But the Herald tries to evade the responsibility by saying that they are employed by other persons, by those from whom it purchases wood, etc. This subterfuge don't mend the matter. Why not purchase wood of those who do not employ Chinese labor? If the Herald were half as zealous in the cause of white labor as it pretends to be, it could easily prevent the employment of Chinese about its premises. But as it tolerates them for the sake of saving money, when it might easily cause their dismissal, it becomes directly responsible for their employment.

The Stockton, Cal., Independent contrasts Iowa with California, much to the disadvantage of the latter State. In 1850 the two States were about equal in population, but Iowa now has three inhabitants to California's one. The natural advantages and resources of California are greater, but Iowa has surpassed her in every way in the development of wealth. The Independent closes its article thus: "While these two States have been reaching these disproportionate results Iowa has been for four years an active participant in the greatest of civil wars, furnishing a quota thereto far in excess of that furnished by California, the latter having been practically free from the vicissitudes of war. Evidently something must have produced this wonderful discrepancy against the greater and more highly favored State. What and where is that something? Would not it be worth while to search for, discover and throttle that palsying, destructive something?"

VARIETIES.

A pork butcher's sign in a French provincial city reads: "Batta, Jr., slaughters hogs like his father."

Commodore Vanderbilt's relatives are reported dissatisfied with his marriage. That three million settlement is the trouble.

An Indiana local paper attributes the deficiency of small change in its town to its being sent to the heathen through the church collections.

"What's that?" asked a schoolmaster, pointing to the letter X. "It's daddy's name." "No, you blockhead, it's X." "Taint X neither, it's daddy's name, for I-seed him write it many a time."

A correspondent has met with the following new Westernism in Idaho: "I asked an old sailor if raspberries were plenty, to which he replied, "Oh, raspberries till you can't rest." A young lady speaking of another about to be married, said, "Oh, you should see her outfit! dresses and dresses till you can't rest!"

A girl in Cincinnati lately adopted a new way of bringing her lover to the "point." She met him on the bank of the river, and charged him with having another "gal," and on his bantering her, attempted to drown herself before his face. Of course he had to rescue her, when the understanding was arrived at without further delay.

THE PATRONAGE DRAMA.—The newspapers of the East, with the exception of the flash prints, have for months been engaged in a warfare against immoral dramas which for a time threatened to entirely supplant the legitimate. At one time, it was said, the sensational, nude-ness, representations, of the Black Crook and Can-Can character, so patronized by the people that almost every respectable theatre in the Atlantic States was closed for want of support. Happy for public morals and happy for those who want and need refined rational amusements, the newspapers have finally succeeded in turning the tide back toward the old and pure drama. The indecent representations to which the public has been engaged in unprecedented numbers, for a few months have come to an end or have been driven into places, in nearly all the eastern cities, where only the recklessly vile, dare go to see them. The legitimate drama is again asserting itself and it is to be hoped that public opinion will assist it, not only by restoring its former hold upon the people, but to give it a higher and purer position than it ever before held. The conservators and teachers of morals cannot be too severe in any secondary labor more likely to result in good to the world than the effort to sustain and elevate and purify the legitimate drama. The people must and will have some amusement. If they cannot have that which is innocent, they will indulge in that which is demoralizing and debasing. Transcendental theorists and fanatical moralists will never drive or pursuade people into the belief that they can get along without some form of amusement which is something more than mere labor or abstaining from labor. It is in human nature to demand something with which the senses or the imagination may employ themselves while they may be resting. This being the case, moralists should help to direct public opinion have it only left to them to form public tastes in the best and most innocent way. With due respect to all the opinions that have been urged by good men against the legitimate drama, we must say we can see nowhere, in amusement as at present, that the public demand so refine the higher and purer style, and at the same time have as little in it to which reason can object. Oro Fino Theater will shortly be opened by a first-class company, and we shall be treated to a season of legitimate drama, for shorter, as the patronage given the company will indicate. While such men as Messrs. Bates and Chapman amuse us and furnish us the class of unobjectionable amusements which the one has given us and the other promises, it is in some sort a public duty to see that they are properly sustained. They should be so if for no other reason than that they defend us from the temptation of less pure amusements. We shall discuss this matter considered by our citizens in the light of reason and common sense, rather than from the standpoint of bigotry and blind intolerance.

AFFAIRS WITH THE INDIANS.—Senator Williams and Superintendent Nesmith, with a few days past, visited the Grand Ronde and Siletz Indian Agencies. The Portland Bulletin has somewhat extended account of what they saw, as obtained from them in conversation, after their return, from which we clip the subjoined extract:

"The occasion embraced in its range Siletz and Grand Ronde and the visitors found found everything in a flourishing condition, the Indians being generally contented and happy. The present condition of the Indians at Siletz and Grand Ronds demonstrates very fully that they can be civilized; can be taken and made men and women of in fact. The Indians were dressed in civilized garb, wore hats and bonnets, coats and dresses, boots and shoes; not a moccasin or moccasin were seen at either place, but were entirely clothed at the sight of women whose faces were not tattooed, in the day of their savage life, who were dressed in full dress, beads and chignons, and jewelry. But the least surprising fact that was met with by the party was to turn out at the Grand Ronds, where at the arrival of families made their appearance at church, in good wagons behind two-horse teams, the whole of the children in comfortable garments, the children being taught in the white schools of the reservation. At Grand Ronde the Indians want the lands divided and located into individual farms; at Siletz they cry out—and plows. In both cases progress is evidence the explained. The Siletz Indians are living in comfortable homes, sit at the meals, at tables spread with knives and forks, and sleep on bedsteads. Simpson is evidently the right man for the place. In charge of remnants of fourteen bands, once the warring Indians of Southern Oregon, who obey the children. Under his influence they have become civilized and comfortable. At Grand Ronde the Indians manage and keep in repair a threshing machine without assistance, and these are the same Indians who a few years ago carried the bow and arrow in the mountains where they were raised.

The Siletz are industrious and earn considerable money by labor; while the Grand Ronds they render efficient service to the settlers in the harvest field; at Siletz they have ample opportunities in connection with the fisheries of the rivers of the Bay. Skeptics have only to go and see the Reservations to recognize the facts stated.

AND HOUSES IN THE SWAMP.—Some years ago there was upon the almost general complaint of our citizens, an ordinance to forbid the running at large of cattle, hogs, and horses within the city limits during certain months of the year, and during certain months of this year. This law, if ever enforced at all, soon became a dead letter, until some time last year, complaints about the depredations of cattle became loud and loud that the old ordinance was resorted to, and forces in the lower portions of the city. The general opinion, both the Marshal and his operations throughout the entire city, and so the people living on the different streets and places are over by cattle and horses. An ordinance was introduced in the Council at the last meeting of the city, to which we have referred, which provides that cattle and horses shall not be allowed to run at large within certain limits, at all, and at certain times. The limits within the prohibition is that part of the city lying between Third and Market streets and Front and the River. This is but a good and sensible ordinance, and should be passed at once, for the protection of the property of citizens. If the ordinance should provide that upon the owners of cattle could be fined for violating the ordinance, it will be a little more binding on the owners of cattle than the old ordinance. Owners should take notice.

NEW WHARF AT EAST PORTLAND.—The work of building a new wharf at East Portland, on which to land the freight from now on the way, will be commenced next week or Tuesday. It is to be built just above the ferry landing. The temporary track to connect with the wharf will be built to the top of the second bank, and will be completed by the time the latter is finished. A report was circulated to the effect that vessels of the class of the Willamette and Steilacoom, and approach the wharf at East Portland, but this is a mistake. The wharf is to be built in a newly made channel.

CIRCUIT COURT—DEADY, J.—Proceedings of Sept. 23d:

State vs. Smith: In this cause, the jury rendered a verdict of guilty, with a unanimous recommendation to mercy. Motion for new trial. On Wednesday at 10 o'clock, and on Thursday a motion was filed in arrest of judgment and for the discharge of defendant; argued and submitted. Cartwright for the United States; Dolph for defendant.

Mona Leon: The performance to-night, by Mlle. Leon and Miss Lambert, will be for the benefit of Mona Leon, the young gymnast and acrobat. These feats are thrilling and astonishing character, and have elicited enthusiastic and unbounded applause from the audience.

The pavilion of the Great World Circus was crowded last night. As on the preceding nights, the performance was excellent and everybody seemed highly pleased. A new programme was presented—riding, leaping, gymnastics, acrobatic feats, trick riding, etc., etc., a splendid bill. Performance this evening.

The Empire Rink.—The den of wild beasts in the Great World Circus will be opened to the inspection of the public at the pavilion at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and will remain open until 5 o'clock. Admission 25 cents—for the children of Mons. Lambert's family. Before closing the menagerie will be treated to the spectacle of a lion fight.

Fish.—We learn that Mr. Wilson, proprietor of the Great World Circus, has a man now in his employ who has been with him for fifteen consecutive years, and has traveled around the world with him. He has what he calls a steady job. It is not often that two men are found in the relation of employer and employe for so long a time.

Fish.—Several merchants at Boise City advertise to trade goods for greenbacks and take them at par with an increase in the price of the goods. The Statesman, referring to this action, says: "The struggle between gold and greenbacks has been long, but it is to be decided in favor of the national currency."

THE GUARD'S TARGET PRACTICE.—This annual affair will occur next Wednesday the 29th inst. We understand the company will go out a short distance from the city, and remain for a few hours at the target, and upon their return have a lunch and possible time among themselves and invited guests, at the Armory.

Mary Collins, convicted of larceny at the present term of the Circuit Court for Multnomah county, and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary, has been pardoned by the Governor, and is now at home with her relatives in the city, only at certain times. The pardon is with the prohibition to steal is that part of the sentence which requires her to wear a ball and chain while laboring on the streets. Mary will be a little more binding on the authorities than the old ordinance. Owners should take notice.

FELL FROM A BALCONY.—Yesterday morning Mrs. Fanny Morgan, Phelps accidentally fell from the rear balcony of the Multnomah Hotel, to the floor of the porch beneath a distance of about fifteen feet. Very fortunately for her she was not seriously hurt.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION.—Jack Harris had a preliminary examination yesterday, before Recorder Anderson, for the killing of Frank Whitney. He was held to bail for the crime of manslaughter and admitted to bail in the sum of $2,000.

SUPREME COURT DECISIONS.—We learn by the Statesman that the case of L. Howe, appellant, vs Douglas county, involving the question of constructive mileage, has been decided. The decision is in favor of the defendant county.

HARVEST OATS.—Mr. G. C. Robison of Yamhill county raised this year twenty-one bushels twenty-eight by of Hickory oats, from eight pounds of seed. He has five bushels were left on the ground.

HARVEST NEWS.—We learn that one farmer on Long Tom, has a small acreage of spring wheat, by the late rain he will be able to commence harvesting.

RIVER NEWS.—The late rise of the river has enabled the steamers to make regular trips to Albany.

REAL ESTATE SALE.—On Saturday, Mr. A. B. Richardson will offer for sale at auction, several pieces of valuable and desirable real estate in this city. See his advertisements.

OREGON PATENT.—A patent was issued on the 7th inst., to Robt. K. and E. C. Spelden, Astoria, Oregon, for a plan for pumping by motion of cars.

REMEMBER the lecture at Philharmonic Hall this evening. A large number of tickets have been sold and a good attendance is expected.

FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—The steamship Moses Taylor, Wm. Metzger, commander, will sail at 5 o'clock this afternoon for San Francisco.

BOARD OF DELEGATES.—There will be a meeting of the Board of Delegates of the Fire Department on Saturday evening.

Legislative Report.

[From the Tidonist, Sept. 22d.]

The public expect us to furnish full reports of the proceedings of the adjourned session and as the 20th was the appointed day our reporter was duly on hand. The only person ahead of him was Colonel White, the well known efficient Chief Clerk of the Lower House. He had made an especial effort and reached Salem several days before hand, and was well fortified in his position when the day came. Colonel Chapman was on hand with the greatest punctuality. The Colonel had been several days in attendance upon the Supreme Court, and to fit himself for the Legislative Strife he had attended Wilson's circus on the Saturday evening previous and watched with keen interest the entry of the intrepid Lambert into the den of raging lions; when, if ever, this Legislature does meet, Colonel Chapman will improve the lesson and have the legislative lions well in hand. They may "shake their manes and wave their tails like the Cedars of Lebanon," but they cannot make a worse fuss than Wilson's African lions did. We predicted the other day that Colonel Chapman would be here. We thought Governor Whitaker would be here, but he failed to come to time. We had hopes that Cox would be here, but that distinguished statesman has neglected the Caucassian race in its time of need, and the last we hear, he is devoting his time to the scrub races of the Umpqua.

Mr. Stout was the only Senator present that has been heard from; he was present and ready for duty—emergency. Fortunately no emergency arose. The only reason the Legislature did not meet was because these two gentlemen did not run against each other the first day; neither did they fall out with each other, which would have disrupted the Democratic party entirely. We met the Colonel in one of the refreshing evening showers, and he looked, under his umbrella, as plaid as a summer morn. He is yet good for many a siege, and will never give this Legislature up if he lives for a thousand years.

SECOND DAY.—SEPT. 21.

Col. White was on hand at breakfast and would have opened the session immediately after if a quorum could have convened. Col. Chapman did not appear, and if he had, it is doubtful if he could have transacted business without an assistant. It is reported, by one of the Supreme Court Judges, that Chapman and Stout held a caucus and then adjourned to Sept. 1, '70. The result of the caucus is the following slate: For State Secretary in 1870, on the Democratic ticket, Col. W. L. White; for U. S. Senator in 1870, Lansing Stout; for Congress, next spring, W. W. Chapman. State warrants are still below par.

A Deserted Mining Camp.

I passed through Hawkin,s Bar. One 49er, Alex. Smith, holds possession of the place. I saw none of the populace as I passed through. There was one house standing, and a sow and her litter of pigs were promenading the hill sides.

Stop under this bush and rest. Shut your eyes! Twenty years ago these banks were lined with men and rockers. The crash of gravel rattling in the selves of the cradles fell on the ear of the new comer, as for the first time from the road up yonder. his eye caught the river, like the roar and clatter of a cotton factory. There was a coming and going of men with blankets, teams were bringing supplies down that gullied track which was once a road; cabins of logs, cabins of brush, cabins of canvas were going up. Supper time, and and squads of miners were seen coming up the bank to their evening meal, carrying pans on whose bottoms shone a marvelous pile of the yellow metal for a day's work. Gawley was taking out his regular pound a day from Gawley's point, and "Bob Gardner" was behind his counter selling whiskey at two bits per glass, boots an ounce per pair and scolding Mike Keough for buying such miserable cigars at Stockton, or if he must bring them telling him to bring some miserable men along, who could smoke them.

Open your eyes! All is still and quiet. The river rolls, and roars, and foams as it did ere Marshall's eye fell on the first nugget at Sutter's mill; but the rattling rockers and busy crowd are gone; gone, save a few lying yonder on the hillside, among those falling palings. The dead generally prove permanent settlers. Half a mile down on yonder point, something moves. It is an Asiatic rocking out three bits per day, where a harum scarum boy in '49 made his regular two ounces. Gone? the gold has gone also. Take that away, and there is peace anywhere.

It is like standing among ruins. A sad feeling comes over us as we gaze on these old cabin sites, a rotten log or two, or shattered, mud plastered chimney marking where they stood, and then look from them on the piles of tailings and cobble stones, the heaping up of which cost perhaps such a vain expenditure of labor. They seem the grave yard of buried hopes and anticipations.—Prentice Mulford

Rolls of honor XVIII and XIX, just issued by the Quartermaster General, embody the record of the interment of forty thousand, three hundred and fifty-three Union soldiers, in the various National Cemeteries. Of these, the names of eleven thousand five hundred and thirty were unknown. The total number of interments reported in all these records is now swelled to about one hundred and ninety three thousand, of whom seventy-three thousand have not been identified. It is supposed that there remains, to be similarly recorded, the interments of about one hundred and twelve thousand more, an aggregate in all of over three hundred thousand of the Union dead, a sad record which should yet be largely increased, to embrace the complete mortality lists of the Great Rebellion.

THE Board of Delegates of the Portland Fire Department will meet at the Council Chamber on Saturday, the 25th inst., at 8 o'clock P. M.

USE KANE'S IMPERIAL CONDENSED SOAP. It washes without rubbing. For sale by Allen & Lewis, Corbitt & McClay, R. G. Sneath and all retailers.

TO HEBREW PARENTS—RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION.—Dr. Eckman has commenced imparting religious instruction to the children of those parents who may be desirous of committing their children under the (almost paternal) care of a man whose truly religious character and simplicity have ever most extraordinarily attuned his mind to that of simple childhood, and exercised a "magnetic" power over the juveniles brought within his influence which unrecognizable minds can never acquire. The instructions will, till the new Synagogue will be completed, be given at the Washington Armory Hall, next building to the Portland Library. Till then, they will be given on the Sabbath and Holy days, after the close of the regular morning service.

By order of the President.

P. LEVIN, Secretary.

CHAPTER I.

THE PRISONER OF MID-OCEAN.

Late one summer afternoon, a dozen years ago, a solitary white man stood before an idolatrous temple on an island in the South Pacific.

He was of middle age, tall, thin, and gaunt, with rugged features and sorrowful eyes, and with every sign of goodness and intelligence.

Beside him was a grim stone idol, in grotesque human form, more than twice as tall as himself, which he had just finished, as was indicated by the mallet and chisel in his hands.

"It is done," he muttered. "And these heathen little suspect that I have put my name and story into the base of this idol."

He ran his eye rapidly over the inscription in question. It was as follows:

"The 5th of May, 1832, I, David Lester, of the firm of Lester & Nichols, of Norfolk, Virginia, sailed as a passenger from Charleston for Hong Kong, off Cape Horn in the ship Hecla. A cyclone struck us in mid-ocean, the ship foundered, and we took to the boats, which all filled, with the exception of the one I was in. After drifting several days, during which my companions perished, I reached this island. The idolatrous inhabitants made me a slave in their temple, and for more than four years I have been doing menial offices and carving images. I have been chained every night, and with almost equal regularity by day, but have twice attempted to escape, and shall soon make another—doubtless my last, as I am resolved to succeed or die, preferring death to a longer captivity. If whoever writes these words upon this idol, praying any one who may see them to report my fate, if possible, to my family, at Norfolk, Va. Finished this inscription this 7th day of July, 1837."

For several minutes the prisoner contemplated these lines in silence, and then aroused himself, looking warily around.

"Three times I have tried to escape in a canoe," he muttered, "and every time I was caught, and visited with tortures. To be caught again in such an attempt will be certain death. Yet I will risk all the first opportunity that offers. This longing for freedom and my family is becoming a positive madness. Oh, my God! what is that?"

He gazed in perfect stupefaction to the eastward, far out upon the ocean.

There, miles and leagues away, was a ship, her white sails gleaming as she lay becalmed upon the waters!

"A ship! a ship!" cried Lester, sobbingly. "At last, oh Heaven! at last my prayer is answered!"

THE PRISONER'S RUSE.

On the west bank of the Elizabeth river, just out of Norfolk, and overlooking Hampton Roads, stood a beautiful cottage, the home of the wife and daughter of David Lester, the prisoner of the lone island, of the far Pacific.

Near the close of a lovely afternoon in May, Mrs. Lester and her daughter sat together upon their front verandah.

The mother was a lovely, sweet-faced, sad-eyed woman of two and thirty years.

The daughter, Amy Lester, not yet fifteen, was a strange compound of child and woman.

"You are thinking of father, dear mother?" murmured the maiden, as she marked the lady's longing gaze.

"Yes, child. Your father, my husband; where is he? Somewhere under the sea waves; perhaps on a desert island, or languishing on a hostile shore! It is five years since he left us on that fatal voyage to China. My reason assures me that he is dead; yet, Amy, I can only think of him as living."

"It is so with me, mother," said Amy, with a tremulous quiver of her lips. "I dream often that he is living—that he is coming home!"

"We think in such different ways," said Mrs. Lester, sighing. "If anything were to happen to me, Amy, I shudder to think what would become of you. You have been brought up in luxury, and would feel keenly any change in poverty."

"Are we poor now, then, mother?" asked Amy, in surprise.

"Supposed so, dear, until three years ago," replied the mother sadly. "Your father was a partner and ship-owner, and friend of Colonel Nichols. But two years ago Colonel Nichols informed me that the outstanding debts of the firm more than balanced the assets in store. My husband was on the verge of bankruptcy, his fortune and yours gone at one stroke."

"Was Uncle Colonel Nichols?" said Amy, quickly. "If he lost all his money with us, how can he live in such grand style? The finest dwelling and the finest horses in town does he drive, and a great house he has, too!"

"Unless my nephew, Ally Bell, Colonel Nichols's ward, has a fortune of his own, counting a farm or two in Virginia, which I do not regard in the business."

Amy remained silent for a few moments reflectively, as if about to reply, when the garden gate swung on its hinges, and a boyish figure came briskly up the walk.

"It's Ally, mother—it's Ally Bell!" exclaimed Amy, all smiles and blushes. "I'll bring him to you."

The young girl ran lightly down the verandah steps and met the new-comer, linking her arm in his, and drawing him gently towards the house.

He was a lad of seventeen, an orphan, the nephew and ward of Colonel Nichols. Bright and gay and handsome, Allen Bell was also impetuous, ardent and intelligent—one of those noble, manly boys who mature early into grand and noble men. Boy as he was, he loved Amy Lester with a pure and chivalrous love, which bade fair to deepen in time into the great love of his life.

He was the bearer of a letter from his uncle to Mrs. Lester, and having delivered it, he strolled with Amy down the wide garden walks into the cool shadows of a grove at the bottom of the garden.

"I've been expecting you this good while, Ally," said Amy, with charming frankness. "I thought you would be down here to try those ventriloquism experiments to-day!"

"We'll try them to-night, Amy," replied Ally. "The whim lights show better at night. I'm getting along pretty well in my geometry, Amy. I like it best of all my studies."

"I am sure you do," said Amy earnestly. "You are the nicest boy I ever saw!"

Ally Bell laughed aloud. Amy's childlike simplicity and outspoken truthfulness were her greatest charm in his eyes.

"The sight of that brig yonder," said Ally, "reminds me that I promised to meet Col. Nichols on board of it directly after I delivered that letter to your mother. I must go now, but you may expect me as soon as it's dark."

He clasped her in his arms, and kissed her.

For a minute the youthful lovers stood at the garden gate, towards which they had slowly strolled, and there they parted soberly—Ally to go down to the brig where he had engaged to meet his uncle, and Amy to return to her mother.

She found Mrs. Lester, the open letter in her lap, silent and motionless as a statue, her attitude that of profound despair.

"What is it, mother?" cried Amy in wild alarm, springing to her side.

Mrs. Lester looked at her daughter with a woe-stricken face.

"O, Amy!" she cried, turning to that brave, girlish heart for strength and comfort. "Colonel Nichols writes me that we are beggars! He informs me that he has asked me three several times to marry him. And, Amy, he says he knows your father to be dead, and he offers himself to me for the last time. He upbraids me of my ill-health, of your youth and helplessness. And he says," and Mrs. Lester's voice broke down in a tempest of sobs, "that on the one hand he offers me wealth, comfort, and happiness, on the other poverty and sorrow. If I refuse him, he swears to turn us out of our home to-morrow!"

"Oh, mother!" exclaimed Amy, with a sharp cry, as she hid her face in her mother's bosom.

CHAPTER II.

A DESPERATE STRUGGLE FOR LIBERTY.

Before Ally Bell reached the brig lying at the wharf, his uncle, Colonel Nichols, had been there and arranged with the Captain, who went by the name of Hiley, to carry Ally off to China, for which service the Colonel promised to give the Captain the brig and ten thousand dollars, in case the boy never comes back. Hiley was a murderer, whose real name was Symmes, and Colonel Nichols knew it. And Colonel Nichols had robbed Mrs. Lester, and now wanted to rob his nephew and have him murdered, and Hiley knew that and resolved that Ally Bell should never see Norfolk again.

"Where is the lad?" he asked as he and Colonel Nichols finished drinking success to their nefarious schemes, to which the Colonel replied:

"He should be here at this very moment. Ah, I hear his step on deck now! Here he comes!"

Even as he spoke Ally Bell came hurrying into the cabin, his face flushed with pleasurable excitement.

"I'm just in time to see you off, Captain Hiley," he said, not noticing the guilty looks of the conspirators. "The wind is fair, and the crew anxious. A good voyage to you, Captain. Bring me some rare shells when you return. They are for a little girl's cabinet, and must be pretty!"

"Aye, aye, Mr. Allen," responded the Captain, heartily. "Didn't you see my collection of shells in yonder state-room? No? You are welcome to your choice of them all, sir."

He advanced, and flung open the state-room door.

Ally bent forward and looked in.

With a quick thrust, Hiley pushed him into the little room, and hurriedly locked the door.

With an exultant smile Colonel Nichols said adieu, and went ashore.

The next minute the hurried trampling of feet was blended with the songs of the stout seamen, as the brig moved slowly from the wharf towards the sea.

Ally's first thought, on finding himself shut up in Captain Hiley's state-room, was that the two men were joking—merely intending to scare him a little, and then let him out; but he soon discovered that the Quickstep—the brig was so named—had left her wharf, and was standing down the Elizabeth river towards the ocean.

The truth flashed upon him!

"I see it all!" he cried leaping to his feet. "Hiley is taking me to sea with him! Captain Hiley!" he shouted, pounding on the door, "open the door this minute! Let me out, or it will be bad for you!"

No reply was made to him—no attention paid to his cries.

He saw that he was fast.

For a moment he was stunned by the knowledge of his situation.

Then he drew up his slight, boyish figure proudly, his eyes flashing defiance.

"The thing for me to do," he mused, "is to help myself. A boy who can't fight his own was will never be a man!"

Drawing from his pocket a match, of which he usually carried a supply, he lighted the candle in its box at one end of the state-room.

"I see," he mentally commented, looking around, in the light thus furnished. "Here's a whole dray load of boxes and bundles. And here's a cannon too," added Ally—"a small one, which is expected, no doubt, to bring a big price from those simple natives in the South Sea.

"I can use this thing," thought the boy, with kindling eyes. "I have plenty of powder in my pocket!"

He had bought this powder just before he came aboard of the brig, for the experiments he had promised to show Amy that very evening.

Without more ado, Ally set at work loading and firing the little cannon as rapidly as possible, smashing the door, and calling out for everybody to keep out of the way. The captain and crew were frantic with fear, as there was a large quantity of powder in the state-room, and the prospect was that the ship would be blown to atoms. Having filled the state-room and cabin with smoke, Ally seized one of the Captain's revolvers, burst open the shattered door, rushed upon deck, and leaped into the river.

"Thunder and lightning!" cried Hiley, startled beyond expression. "After that boy, all of you! Seize him and bring him back! I'll give a hundred dollars to the man who first puts a hand upon him!"

With a yell, six of blood-hounds, half a dozen of Hiley's men, splashed into the river, incited by the promise of money, and spurred by the assault, while Hiley, beside himself with rage, cursed after his men, whom he soon overtook, one after another, and ordered into the boats. They then pulled on after Ally, who had distanced the men while they were in the water, but could not compete with the boat. Arriving at an old, sunken schooner, a long way from shore, the boy climbed upon the topmast, and looked back at Hiley, who was rapidly approaching. The captain felt sure of his prey, and was telling his men how to seize the boy, when Ally suddenly fell from the topmast, as if shot, and immediately sunk from sight.

"Thunder and lightning!" cried Hiley, "he's gone!"

"Gone!" echoed all the men in chorus.

"Yes, gone!" and Hiley sprang to his feet, bounding forward. "I saw him go! He fell back into the water, and went down like a bullet, without the least cry! Pull, for your lives!"

The men obeyed. The boat was quickly beside the topmast. But no trace of the boy could be found!

"I'll take my Bible oath," said Hiley, "that the young salamander has not gone towards the nearest shore or any other. A cramp or a shark has took him!"

The eyes of the scheming villain lit up strangely, almost savagely.

"And such being the fact, men," added he, "we may as well give up the search."

The men resumed their oars, the Captain the tiller, and the boat returned in silence to the brig, with Ally clinging quietly to the stern—his head just far enough out of the water to enable him to breathe—and there he continued to stay until the boat returned to the brig.

And then, the boat being left in the water, at the stern of the brig, it occurred to Ally to unfasten the boat from its painter, let it drift down stream some distance, then climb into it, and row away for Norfolk, which he stoutly did.

For a minute or two the boat continued to speed away in the darkness.

And then Ally climbed out of the water into it, and with a long sigh of relief, seized a pair of oars resolutely.

Crouching out of sight in the bottom of the boat, he began rowing shorewards—but softly, for he was still near the brig, and the night was so calm he feared his enemies would hear him.

There was only too much occasion, as it proved, for this caution.

The boat had not been gone two minutes from the brig when Captain Hiley, wishing to go ashore to see Colonel Nichols, made his way aft, and discovering its disappearance at once sent a couple of men after it in another boat.

Ally seeing that he must again take to the water, took the oars along with him, and went drifting seaward, with nothing but a pair of oars to support him.

The night had now fully set in and the tide ran fast. Cramped and chilled by his long continuance in the water, the boy was whirled along, growing weaker every moment; but just as hope was at its ebb, he suddenly beheld a sail behind him, rapidly approaching, under the force of the freshening breeze.

"A brig, certain!" he groaned after a long look at the nearing cloud of canvass. "It must be old Hiley's! The wind having come again, he is off for the Pacific ocean!"

He regarded the brig, as it came nearer, asking himself if he should hail her.

"Let her be what she may," he muttered, "friend or foe, I must hail her! My strength is used up! I shall soon slip off from these oars and drown! Fortunately the brig is coming straight towards me. I will hail her!"

He waited till the brig was near him, and then carried his resolve into execution. His feeble call was heard and answered, the brig hove to, a boat lowered, and he was taken aboard the stranger. The boy had only strength enough to learn that the brig was not Hiley's, and then he fainted.

CHAPTER III.

MORE VILLAINY.

Captain Hiley, verily believing that Ally was drowned, went ashore to inform Colonel Nichols of the fact. He found the Colonel just coming from Mrs. Lester's cottage, where he had gone an hour before, and stunned Amy by informing her that Ally Bell, her lover and hero, was being carried off to sea in the Quickstep, and that she would never see him again.

The Colonel heard Hiley's story about Ally's disappearance with breathless interest, as they walked along the beach; after which the two villains congratulated themselves upon the boy's being thus completely taken out of their path.

While discussing the matter, they heard the sound of oars, and soon saw a boat approaching the shore opposite a cottage belonging to an old and retired sailor named Nicholas Collins, which was situated at the foot of Mrs. Lester's garden. In the boat was a man, and along with him was a female who was sobbing convulsively. Colonel Nichols, with surprise and alarm, recognized the voice of the weeper as that of Amy Lester. She and her companion left the boat and entered the cottage, from the windows of which a light soon shone. Colonel Nichols and Captain Hiley crept beneath a window to spy and listen. They soon learned that Collins had rowed Amy off to the brig in search of Ally, and that she had there heard of his attempt to escape and his consequent death by drowning.

Amy was vehement in her denunciations of Colonel Nichols, and declared that if Ally was really dead, she would raise the whole country against his uncle who had compassed his death.

On attempting to raise to go home, Amy found she was too weak to walk, and sent Collins for her mother to come to her. As soon as the old sailor had left the Cottage, Colonel Nichols proposed to Hiley that he should carry Amy off instead of Ally, and leave her on a plantation of his on the coast, down by Cape Henry, so as to silence her dangerous tongue, and also give him a hold on her mother. The Captain agreed to this, and they entered the cottage, coming upon Amy so suddenly that, in her weak state, she was so completely overcome that she fainted away.

"So much the better!" said Nichols, stooping and gathering her in his arms. "Now lead the way to your boat, Hiley. On our way, you must forecast Collins' boat, to make him think she did it herself in a wild mood."

He hurried out of the cottage bearing his frail burden. Hiley followed hastily, and the two made their way to the spot where Collins' boat lay. It was but the work of a moment for Hily to push off the little craft and overset it.

"There, they'll think the girl got wild with grief and was drowned in an attempt to search for Ally again!" said the Colonel exultingly, tossing Amy's white apron upon the beach. "That apron will fix the matter beyond a doubt! The wind is rising, Hiley. You had better take advantage of it!"

The two hurried to the waiting boat. Hiley laid the unconscious Amy in the bottom, and then seized the oars and rowed rapidly toward the brig.

Nichols, full of exultation, looked after the boat until it was lost to view.

"My first play was successful!" he muttered. "Ally is dead! I am a rich man! And my second plan promises a like success! When Margaret Lester's heart is nearly broken at Amy's loss, I will offer to restore her child on condition that she will marry me! The day of my full triumph is near!"

He looked with gloating eyes seaward, exulting in his evil success, until at last, nearly an hour later, the sails of the Quickstep filled, and the brig moved swiftly forward the sea, taking with her Margaret Lester's only comfort—the distant father's stay of hope!

CHAPTER IV.

LESTER ESCAPES AND HEARS FROM HOME.

We left David Lester on his lonely island, planning his escape, with a ship in sight from the elevated point where he was at work. He waited till night and until a priest of the the idolatrous temple came to chain him in his dungeon, where they rightly confined him; and then suddenly leaping upon the priest, he bore him to the floor, disarmed and gagged him, disguised himself in his priestly robes, stained his face brown with dirt, went to the shore where the canoes were lying, entered one of them, and paddled out to sea in the direction in which he had seen the ship.

He paddled for hours with all his strength, and had gone so far that the lights of the island could not be seen, and yet no ship had been found; and now the wind was rising and a storm was threatening.

"Oh, God! Am I forsaken?" he cried in an awful anguish, seized with a fear that the wind would force the ship from him. "Must I perish here?"

At that moment when hope was dying, he beheld a sight that turned all his wild woe into yet wilder ecstacy.

There, to the northward, was the ship, standing directly toward him, with all sails set to catch the rising breeze, and not half a mile away.

"Yes, there she is," he shouted. "She is coming this way. I am saved—saved!"

He raised his arms to heaven in a mute thanksgiving, and sobbed aloud, the glad tears streaming down his worn and haggard cheeks.

The ship came nearer and nearer.

He redoubled his wild shouts, his heart and soul in his voice.

An answering cry came suddenly from the ship's deck, and she drew steadily near—swerved from her course slightly, and a rope was thrown from her deck, falling into his canoe.

He seized the rope in desperate eagerness, and a group of sailors leaning over the ship's side drew him aboard.

In an instant more the ship had resumed her course, and was moving in stately fashion before the breeze.

"Safe at last!" murmured Lester, leaning against the bulwarks, weak and nerveless as an infant. "Oh, the gladness of this hour!"

Poor man! He did not dream at that moment that his adverse fate was even then relentlessly closing around him; that he was on one of his own ships—the Cyclone; that that ship was commanded by a bitter foe in league with Colonel Nichols, who, on recognizing him, would without remorse consign him to the mercies of the Pacific in his Indian canoe.

On inquiry, Lester learned that the vessel was the Cyclone, and in the light of the cabin lamp recognized the Captain. Tearing off his priestly robe, and wiping the stain from his face with its coarse folds, he exclaimed:

"Captain Sides, don't you know me?"

"David Lester!" cried the Captain, turning ashy pale, and grasping his stationary seat as though he had received a shock.

Lester wiped his brows and sat down, the Captain taking a seat opposite him.

He had so much to ask, that his emotions choked his utterance, and prevented him from observing the look of deadly hatred with which the Captain regarded him. But he finally plied his questions fast, and learned that his wife yet lived, that his daughter Amy had grown into a lovely girl, and that both wife and daughter had long mourned him as dead. He also learned of his wife's poverty.

"Colonel Nichols settled up the firm affairs" said the Captain, reservedly, "and there was nothing left for Mrs. Lester. She has been living on his bounty these two or three years! When your interest in this ship was sold, I bought it. The Colonel owns the other half!"

"But this is base fraud!" exclaimed Lester. "The Colonel has been untrue to the trust I reposed in him! I have had suspicions of his integrity during my long exile, but I have never dared to entertain them! I'll make matters straight on my return. I can prove my claims and bring him to justice—the dastardly villain! My poor Margaret!" and he groaned.

Lester's threats concerning Nichols seemed to stir up all the malice of the Captain's nature. He beheld his interest in the ship, fraudulently acquired, threatened, and he hated still more the lawful owner whose right in the Cyclone he had usurped.

"If report speaks truly," he said "Mrs. Lester need not be called 'poor!' Colonel Nichols has long been paying her attentions, and when I left port, five months ago, the story was that they were engaged! The Colonel told me himself that he loved her, and meant to marry her. No doubt by this time they are married!"

This cruel thrust struck home to the poor husband's heart, and uttering a great cry, he fell forward with his face upon the table, while the Captain regarded him with a look of mingled hatred and exultation. HIRAM SMITH'S

Ophthalmic Panacea

IS WITHOUT DOUBT THE MOST WONDERFUL EYE SALVE that has yet been discovered. It CURES the most stubborn and hopeless CHRONIC INFLAMMATIONS, GRANULATED LIDS, FILMS, &c., as has been sufficiently demonstrated during the few months in which it has been before the public. The proprietor is so fully convinced of its INFALLIBILITY that he WARRANTS A CURE IN EVERY CASE OR REFUND THE MONEY. It can do the patient no harm, and a trial of it is therefore without injury to any one, if it does not effect a cure.

It has cured cases of FIVE, SIX, NINE, TWELVE and even EIGHTEEN YEARS' standing in a single application, and its results, in the following persons will bear witness:

M. B. MOORE, NATHANIEL
A. L. WALLACE, O. M. WARD,
Mrs. MONTGOMERY, JOHN M.
W. D. PORTER, ROBT. KING.

And others in that vicinity.

Persons afflicted with the disease of weak eyes or diseased eyes are advised to give this remedy a trial, as the NO CURE, NO PAY and NO INJURY principle is adhered to.

TO THE UNFORTUNATE

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,

623 KEARNEY STREET,

San Francisco. Established in 1854,

For the treatment of Sexual and Private Diseases, such as Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

Horrible Disease.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering consequence from the effects of secret indulgence, absorbed into the system! Look at their pale and disfigured faces and their bodily functions, disqualifying them for the duties, enjoyments of life. In this horrid, melancholy state until death closes the scene. Parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are any of these horrible and destroying evils before they are too far gone! Before it be too late, place them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, who has made private diseases his especial study, and is certain to cure the most inveterate cases in the country of any injurious drugs. It is impossible for any one who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the pretended doctors who infest this city, professing to be curing all diseases in A Few Days, by publicly using the names of eminent physicians in Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and scrutinizing, or you may fall into the hands of charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Weakness, the consequence of self-abuse in solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, which by the youth of both sexes to an alarming extent, is producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combated by some powerful influence: Shallowness and confusion of ideas, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, loss of sight, the resulting diseases and disorders of digestion, pain in the back, weakness of the loins, dizziness, universal lassitude of the whole muscular system, blotches on the face, disinclination to society, loss of energy, the whole train of the above symptoms, and finally consumption, epilepsy and insanity.
